The FCT (Capital Markets) program from ManchesterCF analyses the patterns of money laundering, fraud and terrorist financing within global equity, fixed income, currency and commodity markets.

Over the last few years, chaotic volatility has reigned over global capital markets. Major international investment dealers have found themselves unwittingly embroiled in money laundering investigations and compliance failures.

Investment dealers must protect themselves by providing staff with timely and relevant training on criminal activity in international capital markets.

Examples are pulled from both recent and historical events. Transaction mechanics are examined in great detail and from a variety of angles.

For broker/dealers, investment bankers, asset managers and other investment dealers, training programs founded on a risk-based approach to anti-money laundering compliance are not simply a regulatory requirement.

Properly tailored and rolled out across a firm's international operations, this training program can save your firm from becoming enmeshed in a critical financial crime event.

With the prevalence of instant communication and micro-scrutiny by regulators and auditors, no investment dealer can afford mediocre training solutions. Clients will be grateful knowing their investment dealers have received financial crime risk management training.

Regulators are demanding increased attention to detail within a financial institution's AML/ATF training. ManchesterCF's solutions meet and exceed those expectations.
