

FINTEL Environmental Crime

CHAPTERS

- Environmental Crime Offences
- Source, Transit and Destination Countries for Wildlife Crime
- Prevalent Jurisdictions for Illegal Logging
- Laundering the Proceeds of Environmental Crime
- Nexus with Other Crimes
- Detection
- Reporting

Digital textbook

Computer-based training

Examination

Through detailed case studies, examples and red flags, the FINTEL (Environmental Crime) training program advises participants on suspicious financial patterns that may indicate the trafficking of illegal environmental resources.

All of humanity suffers from the effects of environmental crime. Illicit trade in ozone-depleting substances and the dumping and illegal transport of hazardous waste poison the planet. The illegal trade in wildlife, unsanctioned fishing and the black market in timber products destroy nature and jeopardise the quality of life for future generations.

Environmental crime produces enormous profits for transnational criminal groups. Blurring the origins of the proceeds of environmental crime, storing the funds safely and making them readily accessible are key goals for professional money launderers.

Yet the same money laundering activity offers an opportunity for financial institutions and others to report suspicious transaction reports to financial intelligence units, hopefully leading to investigation and prosecution.

Environmental crime often supports a wider network of criminal activity. These illegal practices are most frequently enabled by corrupt politicians and officials who will turn a blind eye to the illegal transport of environmental resources as well as the movement of weapons or the trafficking of humans. History has shown that the proceeds of environmental crime can be used to resource terrorist groups.

To combat environmental crime, financial intelligence must be gathered from a variety of sources. If compliance professionals at financial institutions are able to detect and report on suspicious transactions to the authorities, illegal deforestation and the exploitation of animals can be greatly reduced.

ManchesterCF
Financial Intelligence

ManchesterCF provides financial intelligence training programs and advisory services to financial institutions, financial intelligence units and public-sector agencies worldwide.

Suite 501, 125-720 King Street West
Toronto, Ontario CANADA M5V 3S5

+1.416.388.6051

info@manchestercf.com

manchestercf.com